

WELCOMES NEW FACULTY

Dr. James Hansen is an assistant professor of accounting. He earned his Ph.D. in accounting from the University of Georgia in 2004. After earning his Ph.D., he taught auditing at the University of Illinois at Chicago for five years. Last year he taught Intermediate Accounting at Oregon State University. Professor Hansen enjoys teaching and loves to see his teaching help students excel in their careers. “I look forward to helping students get prepared for their careers in accounting and business. I look forward to getting phone calls or emails from students letting me know about their success in the professional world and I look forward to working with a wonderful set of colleagues with so much knowledge, expertise, and enthusiasm.” His research examines corporate governance and earnings management and has been published in Current Issues in Auditing, Journal of Accounting Literature, and the Journal of Accounting and Public Policy. Prior to academia, Professor Hansen worked for Arthur Andersen in the Phoenix, Arizona office. He earned his Bachelors and Masters Degrees in Accounting from Brigham Young University in 1999.

Dr. David E. Cavazos is an assistant professor of management at Anderson. He holds a B.A. in Economics, a Master of Public Administration, and a Ph.D. in Business Administration all from Texas Tech University.

Dr. Cavazos comes to Anderson from the James Madison University College of Business in Harrisonburg, VA where he taught strategic management and organization theory classes since 2006. His research has been published in the Academy of Management Learning and Education, Technology Analysis and Strategic Management, International Journal of Organizational Analysis, and Business and Society Review. Dr. Cavazos additionally serves as an associate editor of the Journal of Management Inquiry. In the upcoming year Professor Cavazos looks forward to “collaborating with his new colleagues and helping Anderson students achieve their academic and professional goals.”

Dr. Manuel-Julian R. Montoya is an assistant professor in the Anderson FITE Department. He completed his Ph.D. studies in both Foreign Relations and Comparative Literature at Emory University in the spring of 2010. His area of expertise is global structures and interdisciplinary studies of the world political economy. “Global structures and global relationships are taking on new and more complicated meanings every day,” says Professor Montoya. “Additionally, the role that business leaders play in the global political economy has become an extremely important component in developing a secure and sustainable life for all beings on this planet. I look forward to working with the world class faculty at Anderson in producing scholarship that helps us think through the major issues of the global political economy in the 21st century while training diverse and agile minds that will help sustain the planet for future generations.” Dr. Montoya is a Rhodes Scholar and Truman Scholar with Masters studies from both Oxford and New York University. He is originally from Mora, New Mexico and UNM is his undergraduate Alma Mater where he graduated summa cum laude. He is excited to return to his home state. “I believe New Mexico is a special place with a history oriented towards a sense of planetarity, and I look forward to serving New Mexico and its history by helping secure its rightful place as an important part of our common global heritage.”

Dr. Leslie Boni is an associate professor of finance. Her research has been published in the Journal of Financial and Quantitative Analysis, Journal of Financial Markets, Journal of Money, Credit, and Banking, Financial Analysts Journal, Journal of Trading, and the Brookings Institute Papers on Financial Services. She has served as a visiting academic scholar at the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission, as a finance professor at the California State University Northridge, and as a lecturer at the University of Southern California. Dr. Boni holds a B.S. in chemical engineering from Northwestern University and a Ph.D. in finance from the University of Colorado at Boulder. Dr. Boni says she is “tremendously excited about the opportunity to work with our Anderson students to manage the equity and fixed income portfolios. The Anderson student-managed fund program is top notch, and I look forward to being part of it.” Prior to returning to the University of New Mexico, Professor Boni was the Managing Director of Quantitative Strategies and Performance Analytics for UNX, Inc., in Burbank, California. She has also worked for 15 years in the oil industry as chemical engineer, trader, and risk manager.
